Our philosophy / Four essentials / Your ritual

The structure of skin. The source of our inspiration.

Dermellow began with the needs of Korean clinical practice and skin research. We bring medical expertise and wound-care technology into product research to develop thoughtful skin care.

ECM / EXTRACELLULAR MATRIX

The extracellular matrix (ECM) is a natural network surrounding cells that forms the structural environment of tissue. It inspires Dermellow's approach to skin-care research.

Conceptual illustration of skin structure

01 Research rooted in clinical practice

Expertise from clinical practice and regenerative-medicine research informs product development.

02 Dermatologist guidance

Dermatologists' clinical experience informs product planning and development.

03 Joint research with T&L

We draw on the expertise of T&L, a specialist in wound care and medical devices, in our product research.

Four essentials. One ampoule.

Four ingredient groups inspired by skin structure. Focused care for hydration and a smooth, radiant look.

COLLAGEN

89%

Collagen

A key ingredient in our skin-structure-inspired formula, at the heart of care for supple, smooth-feeling skin.

ELASTIN

3%

Elastin

Elastin is a structural protein associated with elasticity. Together with collagen, it supports care for supple, smooth-feeling skin.

ECM COMPONENTS

7.6%

ECM components

Hydrolyzed collagen, fibronectin, soluble elastin and multiple peptides: ingredients inspired by the skin's structural environment.

GAG / HYALURONIC

0.4%

GAG · Hyaluronic acid

A moisturizing system with hydrolyzed glycosaminoglycans and multiple forms of hyaluronic acid delivers a hydrated feel to the skin.

Ingredient-group composition · as stated in the Korean brochure

Descriptions refer to the properties of the ingredients.

HYDRATE

Moisture care for dry, tight-feeling skin

ELASTICITY

A supple, smooth skin texture

GLOW

Radiance for rough, dull-looking skin

REFRESH

Moisturizing and soothing care with centella and panthenol
